NEW ALBUM ‘CHASED BY WOLVES’

RELEASED FRIDAY 6 SEPTEMBER

Alternative indie-rock band Flight Brigade are excited to announce the release of their new single ‘Fury Road’ on Friday 22nd March. The single is taken from the band’s new studio album ‘Chased By Wolves’ on Friday 6th September via Wixen Music Publishing.

The official Fury Road video will be premiered on YouTube on Friday 1st March via <https://youtu.be/BR2z0oY0NpY>

Touring extensively and playing the major UK festivals including Glastonbury, Bestival, and The Great Escape, Flight Brigade have garnered a reputation from fans and critics alike for exceptional and explosive live performances. One such performance, at ‘The Castle’ in Manchester in March 2017 caught the ear of esteemed producer Chris Porter (George Michael, Elton John, Bowie). Porter promptly invited the band to record their forthcoming second album at The Visconti Studio.

Their sound is as distinctive as it is unique. Infectious melodies and hooks flow through songs that at times exude fierce energy and at others gentle poignancy. With grand orchestral sweeps, crunching anthemic guitars, strings and synths, their explosive performances feel like it’s their last day on earth!

"Astonishing" – BBC Radio 2

"A direct, driving sound, one that bears comparison to Arcade Fire but also has the crunch of Twin Atlantic. New single 'Hurricane Season' boasts an orchestral swell, while the songwriting has a real punch to it." – Clash Music Mag

"Smack-bang into that global radio-friendly crossover territory usually inhabited by Imagine Dragons and The Killers." – Record of the Day

"On a warpath to making history... a bit of Muse, compared to My Morning Jacket, but ultimately what we hear is a dark, orchestral, and narrative-driven tour de force." – New Sick Music

FLIGHT BRIGADE – BIOGRAPHY

Think of Flight Brigade as a family as much as a band and you start to understand the chemistry between them. Think of their songs as epic stories to which each member is essential, and you begin to grasp what makes their music so powerful. Watch them perform and you can't fail to be struck by the special bond they share.

"Our relationship drives everything we do," explains lead singer Ollie Baines. "Our sound is all of our influences and the tension between them". Flight Brigade's strength lies in the scope of their songs, the songwriting craftsmanship and the ambition of their arrangements. The striking mix of male/female vocals, crunching anthemic guitars, orchestral strings and vintage synths have bought them comparisons to Arcade Fire and Fleetwood Mac, whilst Ollie's intense, storytelling lyrics set them apart.

At the core of Flight Brigade is an actual family. Ollie and Miriam are married. Miriam and violinist Dorry are sisters. The trio grew up in each other's pockets, their families part of a hippy commune in Hampshire where Ollie's family settled after moving from Ohio in the US. Bassist Tom Clay, guitarist Thomas Pink, keyboardist Jonny Barker and drummer Neil Blandford were childhood friends who lived nearby.

In 2016 they released their debut album, 'Our Friends Our Enemies'. The album's title track was inspired by a story about Czech factory workers forced to make bombs for the Nazis. Some risked their lives by neglecting to include detonators, so that when the bombs dropped, they didn't explode. "It was on a production line, in front of soldiers," explains Ollie, "so it's a story of bravery. One even put a note inside a bomb saying, 'this is all we can do for now'".

The band's forthcoming second album includes similarly intriguing stories but also hits a more personal nerve. Songwriter and lyricist, Ollie Baines draws from his own experience of the beauty and fragility of relationships (Heartbreaker, Tinderbox), surviving unlawful advice from the 'wolves' of the music industry (Chased By Wolves) and pays homage to his brother's courageous battle with epilepsy (Brainwave).

Touring extensively and playing the major UK festivals including Glastonbury, Bestival, and The Great escape, Flight Brigade have garnered a reputation from fans and critics alike for exceptional and explosive live performances. One such performance, at 'The Castle' in Manchester in March 2017 caught the ear of esteemed producer Chris Porter (George Michael, Elton John, Bowie). Porter promptly invited the band to record their forthcoming second album at The Visconti Studio.

In 2018 the band signed to Wixen Music Publishing (Neil Young, The Black Keys, Rage Against The Machine) and continued to have their music used in TV and film in the UK and US with 'Made In Chelsea', Channel 4's 'Sunday Brunch', E4's 'Tattoo Fixers' and 'The Boston Strangler'. With lots of support from BBC Introducing, radio play has included, Dan O'Connell Radio X, Steve Lamacq & Tom Robinson BBC 6 Music, Bob Harris & Janice Long BBC 2 and Tom Allen CBC Radio 2, Canada.

Members Ollie, Thomas and Dorry also compose for film, adverts and TV, an expanding side project that has a commission for ITV, an advert for NBC in the US, and independent films such as the upcoming 'Learning the Ropes' narrated by Ray Winstone.
